

HOUSTON FIRE DEPARTMENT - A TRIBUTE TO HOUSTON'S FALLEN HEROES

Written by Jeffrey L. Boney
Wednesday, 05 June 2013 00:00

Untitled document

Never in the 118-year history of the Houston Fire Department (HFD) has a fire been so deadly that it cost HFD the lives of so many brave public servants at one time.

Such a tragedy occurred this past Friday afternoon, when roughly 150 firefighters responded to a massive, out-of-control five-alarm motel fire that took place in Southwest Houston.

The Houston Fire Department said this was the single deadliest day in department history.

The fire began shortly after noon at Bhojan, an Indian restaurant, according to a statement released by the Houston Fire Department, and soon engulfed the adjacent Southwest Inn, a motel located off of Hwy. 59, otherwise known as the Southwest Freeway.

Houston Fire Chief Terry Garrison stated that the four firefighters who died in the blaze took a high risk to aggressively fight the fire by going into the burning building to look for people they thought were trapped inside. After a major portion of the building collapsed, the four firefighters became trapped.

HOUSTON FIRE DEPARTMENT - A TRIBUTE TO HOUSTON'S FALLEN HEROES

Written by Jeffrey L. Boney
Wednesday, 05 June 2013 00:00

Copyright © 2013 Houston Fire Department. All rights reserved. Houston Fire Department is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. Houston Fire Department is not responsible for the content or accuracy of any information posted on this website. Houston Fire Department is not responsible for any damage or loss of data that may occur while using this website. Houston Fire Department is not responsible for any damage or loss of data that may occur while using this website.