

Long before Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. hit the national stage and delivered his world-renowned “I Have a Dream” speech in Washington D.C. on August 28, 1963, twenty-two African-American women had already blazed a major trail for Civil Rights in the same city more than 50 years earlier.

Fast forward to this past weekend, where in the nation’s capital, more than 12,000 members of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority gathered together to celebrate the sorority’s 100th anniversary. The gathering in D.C. marked the celebration of the organization’s centennial year, with a weekend full of activities which included community service, a rededication and an awards ceremony.

NATIONAL INFLUENCE

Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc. is a private, non-profit organization whose purpose is to provide assistance and support through established programs in local communities throughout the world.

Written by Jeffrey L. Boney Associate Editor
Wednesday, 16 January 2013 00:00

