So, according to Rick Ross, Africa is a country and not a continent, and U.O.E.N.O. On Monday afternoon, the rapper tweeted that the world was excited for label mate Wale's upcoming album, "The Gifted" and among those excited was the entire "country of Africa." I simply palmed my face when I saw this foolishness on my Twitter timeline because I'm pretty sure that anyone with an elementary-level education learned that Africa is one of the seven continents.

Ross has recently lost a Reebok endorsement for boasting of drugging and having sex with a woman without her knowing in his lyrics in Rocko's "U.O.E.N.O." He has stated that he didn't know that this would be considered rape. So, if Rick Ross doesn't know that "putting Molly all in her champagne" and taking her home to "enjoy that" without her even knowing is considered rape, how can we expect for him to know that Africa is a continent and not a country?
