Zombies no more?

Excluding the infamous Miami Zombie case, some authorities think the recent hash of zombie attacks across the country have been due to bath salts.

But President Obama has had enough.

Last week, the president banned bath salts and 31 other synthetic substances. Dr. Rani G. Whitfield of Baton Rouge, LA., was just one of several medical doctors who breathed a sigh of relief.

“I’ve been practicing medicine for 12 years, and I’ve never seen anything like this,” he told NewsOne. “When problems began surfacing in the emergency room a little over a year ago, we were seeing psychotic episodes and extreme agitation. The kids were telling us about a new drug called ‘bath salts.’ We didn’t know what it was. They were like, ‘No, it’s not what you put in your water. It’s not ‘Calgon take me away.’”
